TECA presents: R. Allan Dobie, Sr.Consultant, CMHC

Impact of High Performance Home on HVAC design

Allan will present several high performance house examples that have very high insulation and air tightness values. These homes have required consequentially high performance heating and ventilation strategies. CMHC research has concluded that good ventilation and indoor air quality are directly related to human health. Tight houses require extra care in providing adequate ventilation without sacrificing heat energy. The importance of HRV's and the location of this equipment will be discussed.
