Setting the Standard for BC's Residential Heating, Ventilating & Air Conditioning Professionals

Whether you are involved in the hydronic, forced-air or ventilation portion of the residential and light commercial mechanical trade, the Thermal Environmental Comfort Association invites you to join our growing association.

Our provincially registered, non-profit society was formed in May 2006 through the amalgamation of HVCI and RHWHA whose reputations were built on the technical accuracy, ease of use, inspectability and low cost of their training courses and materials.

TECA offers the industry a collective voice in local and provincial issues relating to our trade. Current projects include the Certified Heating Technician program, a joint initiative by TECA and GeoExchange BC to train and credential residential heating, ventilating and air conditioning contractors in BC.

Approximately 80% of TECA's members are heating contractors.
